George's litigation practice involves representing clients in complex construction and commercial disputes. He has successfully first-chaired dozens of jury trials, bench trials, and private arbitrations, and numerous prevailing oral arguments before the Nevada Supreme Court. George also regularly appears on behalf of clients before various municipal boards and governmental agencies. George's clients include multinational corporations, national and regional construction companies, and mid-size to large local businesses.

George's construction law and litigation experience primarily involves public works projects and large private commercial projects, including contractor-owner disputes, general contractor-subcontractor disputes, and construction defects. George has handled many highly publicized legal issues relating to the prominent business activities that have transformed the Las Vegas landscape. For example, George was lead counsel for the general contractor in the $1 billion litigation involving the construction of Project CityCenter, lead counsel for the general contractor in the litigation involving the $500 million Planet Hollywood Towers project, and lead counsel for the general contractor in the litigation involving the River Mountains Water Treatment Facility and the Raw Water Pumping System Expansion at Lake Mead.

George is ranked in the highest Band I category in Construction Litigation in Chambers USA: America's Leading Lawyers for Business, the premier global resource for selecting outside counsel.

Clients describe George to Chambers researchers as “an extremely good lawyer.” “He has a very good reputation in construction law cases, where he handles the larger matters.” “George is a very experienced attorney with a very good reputation among both lawyers and judges.”

As a native Las Vegas and fifth generation Nevadan, George is committed to public service and advocacy for the people of Nevada by serving in leadership positions at numerous civic organizations. He served as Chairman of the Commission under two Governors from 2009 to 2016. For nearly 10 years, he led, served, and worked with staff and other Commission members on water and energy issues critical to Nevada’s future. He has also provided numerous years of volunteer service to Nevada’s judicial system by serving on multiple Eighth Judicial District Court committees, including its Technology Committee and the Business Court Rules committee. Today, George continues more than ten years of service as a member of the Government Affairs Committee of the Las Vegas Metro Chamber of Commerce and six years of service as a Trustee for the Nevada Museum of Art.
