Education

B.S., Health Ecology, University of Nevada, Reno

Lindsay Knox serves as a key resource for clients, advocating on their behalf and closely monitoring legislation and regulation to identify potential issues. She has worked at McDonald Carano for more than 15 years and offers tangible experience in a broad range of industries such as public safety and homeland security, health care, education, water, gaming, transportation, hospitality and lodging.

Ms. Knox is involved in a variety of initiatives at the state level, including drafting amendments, reviewing bills, testifying before committees and collaborating with other lobbyists. She consistently draws upon her extensive network of contacts to make necessary connections on behalf of her clients. On a local level, Ms. Knox skillfully manages and maintains important relationships with elected officials and key staff while closely tracking changes in the law and regulation to ensure seamless and continuous business compliance.

Outside the office, Ms. Knox has been involved in a variety of community organizations. For example, she was involved in Operations Downtown created by Reno Mayor Hillary Schieve to help find solutions to advance redevelopment and address complex issues faced by downtown Reno, including poverty, homelessness, blight, safety and housing. Ms. Knox also worked on behalf of the SAS Institute, where she collaborated with state and local government agencies on how to improve and leverage their use of data to better serve the public.
